Hail of bullets kills brave Philly policeman

Blue line. Officer Robert Wilson III fired back on his attackers. One was wounded and both were arrested.

Robert Wilson III, an eight-year veteran of the Philadelphia Police Department and father of two, was shot and killed during a robbery at a North Philadelphia video-game store Thursday afternoon.

"He was doing his duty as a police officer, trying to protect the citizens of this city," Mayor Michael Nutter said. "He had a family. He was part of our family."

Police say Wilson was in uniform in the GameStop store at 22nd and Lehigh when two men entered the store and announced a robbery.

Wilson immediately engaged the suspects.

"Both individuals … I am told, were on both sides of him firing at close range," Police Commissioner Charles Ramsey said.

The suspects were carrying a 9mm and a .40-caliber handgun, one of which had an extended clip, making it capable of carrying far more bullets.

Despite being shot at from both sides, Wilson was able to shoot back, Ramsey said, before being hit multiple times himself.

Quoted

"Our officers are valiant. Our officers are strong. … Never forget him."
Nutter

Wilson's partner, Damien Stevenson, responded to the gunfire and engaged in a gunfight with the suspects.

One of the suspects was wounded. Police do not know if he was hit by Wilson or his partner. He was transported to Einstein Hospital. The second suspect, Ramsey said, was arrested by responding officers after he tried to blend into the crowd. Their identities were not released because they had not been charged at press time.

The call of "officer down" went out at 4:44 p.m. as Wilson was transported to Temple University Hospital in "extremely critical condition" where he was pronounced dead at 6:25 p.m.

Wilson, the father of a 9-year-old boy and 1-year-old baby, was assigned to the 22nd District, and was known personally by Ramsey.

"He was one of the best police officers this city has to offer, period. A very, very brave and heroic individual," Ramsey said outside Temple University Hospital just before 8 p.m. "A 9-year-old boy is going to grow up without a dad because of what happened today."

Wilson was remembered as a "leader" by 22nd District Captain Robert Glenn. "Officer Wilson was an outstanding officer," Glenn said just before 8 p.m. Thursday. "He was a leader of his squad."

Mayor Michael Nutter asked the public to pray for Wilson's family.

Snowbirds. Bald eagles in snowy Penn. nest draw webcam views

Check out this pic of a snow-covered bald eagle near Cordorus State Park outside of Hanover, Pa. that was pulled from live streaming video.

A male and female pair are incubating two eggs right now, said park manager Warren Werntz.

"The area underneath their bellies is very warm," Werntz said.

Look closely, and you may see the pair take turns in the nest. Park officials believe the pair are feeding off of a dead deer nearby.

"We're getting people calling from all over the world," Werntz said.

SUV slams into bank

At least three occupants of a white SUV that slammed into a North Philadelphia bank fled on foot Thursday morning, police said.

The crash happened around 2 a.m. at the United Bank of America branch at Broad and Jefferson streets; a parked car was also hit and an ATM badly damaged.

The cash remained safely inside.

Cops are investigating whether the vehicle was stolen. METRO

Chester

Police depts may unite

The Local Daily News is reporting that seven Chester County municipalities may consolidate into one regional force.

The seven are Kennett Square, Kennett Township, New Garden, Avondale, London Grove, West Grove and East Marlborough.

"We're past the dating stage, now we are moving into the let's take this seriously stage," said Kennett Square Mayor Matt Fetick. METRO

Snow coats Philadelphia, at last

So the city finally got hit with the long-promised blizzard — and instead of being completely miserable, most Philadelphians seemed to enjoy it. The Snowfall exceeded this winter's record of 4 inches by 1 p.m. Thursday with about 4.5 inches of the white stuff stuck to streets and sidewalks. By nightfall, Philadelphia was under 6 inches of pristine powder. / CHARLES MOSTOLLER

Cabbies lose bid to ban Uber

Philadelphia cab companies, threatened by the expansion of Uber Technologies Inc., lost a court bid to block the on-demand car service from operating in the city.

Checker Cab Philadelphia Inc. and 44 other companies failed to show they would be irreparably harmed if Uber continued to operate, a federal judge ruled Tuesday. The complaint, filed in December alleging unfair competition, also falls short of demonstrating a likelihood of success, the judge said. The ruling is preliminary and the case will continue.

"These issues are best left to the state and local legislative bodies and regulatory authorities charged with implementing and enforcing the ordinances and regulations that plaintiffs here seek to enforce by way of private litigation," U.S. District Judge Nitza I. Quinones Alejandro wrote.

In November, Uber won permission from Pennsylvania regulators to operate its UberX service within the state except in Philadelphia. The city's Parking Authority, which governs taxi services there, has opposed Uber's presence, the Philadelphia Inquirer reported Nov. 15.

The Philadelphia cab companies described Uber's services in their lawsuit as "gypsy cabs" and accused the company of violating federal and state laws by operating without official certificates of public convenience or medallions.

City budget tax hike to aid schools

Money. Rise in property tax would help fill school funding gap.

In outgoing Mayor Michael Nutter's final, $4 billion budget, which was delivered Thursday, the most notable item was a call for a 9.34-percent property tax hike to fund public schools.

The proposed tax millage rate increase would raise $105 million, which would amount to a $100 annual tax increase on the average homeowners.

Nelson A. Diaz, a candidate for the Democratic nomination for mayor, described the proposal as a "damned if you do, damned if you don't" choice.

"We've reached the end of the road with our current tax system," Diaz said. "Without fundamental, soup-to-nuts reform, we're going to continue to be forced into choosing between nearly double-digit tax increases on residential property taxpayers, or funding our schools. … There's a better way forward."

City Council President Darrell Clarke gave the budget positive nods for including efforts to get 40,000 eligible residents signed up for the Federal Earned Income Tax Credits program and increasing funding to the Department of Licenses & Inspections, but called the school funding plan "uncertain."

"We must analyze the impacts of Gov. [Tom] Wolf's proposed property tax relief and Mayor Nutter's proposed 9.34 percent rate increase on households," Clarke said. "In addition, it will be some time before we have more certainty about whether the General Assembly will do its part to support our students."

Responding to the proposed budget, mayoral candidate Jim Kenney's spokeswoman Lauren Hitt said Kenney "believes that we must increase funding for our schools, but we can't do it entirely on the backs of our working families."

Philadelphia's miniscule Republican Party denounced the mayor's budget as "a Nutter crushing blow to the taxpayers," and said the city's tax rates are undermining plans for economic growth.

Budget app

If you're perplexed by the budget, there's an app for that: City Hall has released a new program called Open Budget (www.phila.gov/openbudget/) that lets citizens delve into the inner workings of the budget.

Five things you need to know

1 Witnesses describe Boston bombing victims' final moments

Jurors in the Boston Marathon bombing trial heard poignant eyewitness testimony on Thursday about the final moments of the three people killed in the attacks, when twin bombs ripped through crowds at the race's finish line in 2013.

A father of three recalled watching people trying in vain to revive 8-year-old Martin Richard, one Boston police officer remembered administering CPR to 29-year-old Krystle Campbell and a second officer said she left the body of 23-year-old Lingzi Lu only when ordered to by her captain, amid fears there could be a third bomb.

Defendant Dzhokhar Tsarnaev, 21, has admitted through his attorneys that he and his older brother carried out the April 15, 2013, bombing that killed three people and injured 264. He is also on trial for the fatal shooting of a police officer three days later. But he has not changed his plea from not guilty, leaving it to a jury to convict him and, if they do, to determine whether to sentence him to death or life in prison without possibility of parole.

2 US warns about youths seeking Islamic State connection

The FBI and Department of Homeland Security have warned law enforcement agencies across the country about American youths wanting to join Islamic State militants fighting in the Middle East, officials said on Thursday.

The joint intelligence bulletin was issued during the weekend and law enforcement said such warnings are routine. One official said there was no increase in government threat levels, although there is heightened concern lately about recruitment of American and other foreign fighters by Islamic State.

3 BNSF train with 103 crude oil cars derailed in Illinois

BNSF Railway said that a train with 103 cars loaded with crude oil derailed on Thursday afternoon in a rural area south of Galena, Illinois, according to local media quoting a company statement.

The statement added that company responders were en route, but there was no further information available. It added no injuries were reported.

4 Review of Hillary Clinton emails to take months: US official

A growing controversy over Democrat Hillary Clinton's use of personal email for work while she was U.S. secretary of state could drag on for months, threatening to cloud the expected launch of her 2016 presidential campaign.

Clinton tried to cool the brewing firestorm late on Wednesday, saying she wanted the State Department to release the emails quickly. But a senior State Department official told Reuters on Thursday the task would take time.

"The review is likely to take several months given the sheer volume of the document set," the official said. REUTERS

5 Attacker slashes face of US ambassador in South Korea

U.S. ambassador to South Korea Mark Lippert underwent two-and-a-half hours of surgery after he was slashed in the face by a Korean nationalist in an attack at a breakfast forum in Seoul on Thursday to discuss Korean reunification.

Lippert, 42, was bleeding from deep wounds to his face and wrist but was able to walk after the attack. Doctors said later his condition was stable after "very successful" surgery that required 80 stitches in his face.

Interview with Inna Shevchenko. 'We change people's mentality'

They are the feminists (in) famous for their bare-breasted protests targeting everything from Vladimir Putin to fashion week. But just who are FEMEN? Metro chats to Inna Shevchenko, the 24-year-old leader of the protest group, who was granted political asylum in France after fleeing Ukraine and continues her activism from a training base she established there.

Inna Shevchenko / GETTY IMAGES

This is the fifth in a Metro series leading up to International Women's Day on March 8.

3 days to International Women's Day

Why did you join FEMEN?
It was a lucky circumstance. In 2009 I was studying journalism at Taras Shevchenko National University of Kyiv and worked at the press office of Kiev's mayor. Yes, I saw problems that women face in Ukraine: some of my friends had to spend a night with teachers to pass exams. But I never thought I'd enter such an organization, they did not ever exist in the same form. One day I received a message on Facebook saying: "Hello, we are women's movement FEMEN, we are against prostitution. Join us." I have never thought if I'm for or against prostitution, so I was very surprised. But, anyway, I decided to visit this meeting just to observe. It was a gloomy scene: A Soviet-style café, 15 same-looking girls around the table, two cups of tea that they were sharing. We discussed how prostitution uses women, about our weariness of sex tourists who roam the Ukrainian streets, etc. But we were taught by our mothers, that every woman has to find a husband. So, it was a paradox in our minds. We started to read, analyze, listen to other opinions and understand that our mothers lied or were just plain wrong.

So, there is no need to look for a husband?
There is a need to search for your rights. Even in Europe there's a belief that feminism should not exist, due to the many protests in the '70s. Women got the right to vote. That's a victory? It's only the first step. So, better not to search for a husband, but rather your rights, self-realization, etc. .

Who are your enemies?
We started with prostitution. Statistics said at that time 60 percent of Ukrainian women were involved in the sex industry. But it's illegal there. We investigated it and understood the that local government is covering it up. Later we identified our "main enemy," who we still pursue: patriarchy. It is propped up on three pillars: dictatorship (that denies any sharing of power with women), religion (that denies rights of women to their own bodies, wishes and education) and sex industry.

DMITRY BELYAEV / MWN

Question

Have you achieved some recently?

Yes, for example, the Spanish government wanted to ban abortion. Three of our activists appeared during the parliamentary session with slogans across their chests, demanding women's rights. And we won: public opinion and other protests made the government motion disappear. Some months ago in France the General Assembly wanted to adopt a bill that criminalizes people who use prostitutes. But it was suspended by the Senate. We burst into their office and the wave of public protests began. Now we are waiting for the outcome. Our historical victory is that we changed people's mentality towards women. Now all the world knows that Ukrainian women are not prostitutes, they are fighting for their rights.

NYC. Jet slides off airport runway

Despite the snow, ice and even low visibility — a quarter of a mile at the time — by many accounts Delta Flight 1086's morning jaunt from Atlanta to New York should have been routine.

It was anything but.

Passengers say everything seemed normal, until the wheels made contact with Runway 13 around 11 a.m., and kept on going.

Sliding — or skiing, as one passenger later described the experience — the plane hooked a left, crashed through a fence and came to an abrupt stop atop a protective flood water berm, its left wing spewing fuel at a gallon a minute.

The MD-88 precariously jutting out over Flushing Bay / FDNY

There were 127 passengers and five crew on board. The FDNY said two dozen people suffered minor injuries — mostly back and neck — and three were taken to hospital.

Phil Derner, founder of NYCAviation.com told Metro there's no smoking gun he sees in the incident and said a unique circumstance — a tailwind shift or mechanical breakdown — are among possible causes.

The Port Authority, which runs the airports, repeatedly noted at a news conference that Runway 13 was just plowed. Foye wouldn't speculate on what went wrong. That will be determined by the National Transportation Safety Board investigation.

Murder trial

Jodi Arias escapes death penalty after jury deadlocks

An Arizona jury failed to reach a verdict on Thursday in the sentencing retrial of Jodi Arias after a lone juror refused to back the death penalty, a development that spared the former waitress from execution for murdering her former boyfriend.

It was the second time a jury has been unable to decide whether the 34-year-old Arias, convicted of murder in 2013, should be executed for the 2008 killing of Travis Alexander. Under Arizona law, she can no longer be sentenced to death. REUTERS

The roots of rock salt

In upstate New York, one small town has been mining the salt that clears snow and ice from winter roads for over a century.

"It's dark everywhere in the mine, darkest dark you've ever seen. You don't know darkness till you've been down there. You go down there and you don't know if your eyes are open or shut." says miner Jesse Kingston. Entry to the mine is through an elevator which drops 1,770 feet to a series of excavated caves covering an area nearly the size of Manhattan. The mine reopened in 1997, after a flood shut it in 1994. Today, the American Rock Salt Co. mine in Hampton Corners, New York, produces 10,000 to 18,000 tons of salt each day, shipped by truck and rail across the Northeast.

Salt is extracted from the mine through the undercut process. In salt caverns deep below ground, a giant chain saw on wheels cuts along the bottom of the salt face. Holes are drilled in the face, filled with explosives and detonated. Front loaders then load the salt — which has been loosened by the explosion — into a sifter, from where it travels by conveyor belt to the surface, and is loaded onto trucks and rail cars.

SOME SALT IS STORED ABOVE GROUND TO ENSURE A STEADY SUPPLY IN CASE OF A PROBLEM IN THE MINE.

What a difference an hour makes

Daylight saving time. Don't be a zombie when the clocks roll back this Sunday morning.

This Sunday, daylight saving time will come to collect on that extra hour you were given back in November as we all take that involuntary leap into the future at 2 a.m. It means one fewer hour to get dinner ready, one less hour to exercise, and most importantly, one less hour to sleep. What exactly are the effects of losing this precious hour?

"It's more than losing an hour," Pete Bils, the vice president of sleep innovation and clinical research at Sleep Number mattress company, tells us. "If you actually set the table and look at the timeframe of daylight saving time, it's kind of setting up a perfect storm of sleep problems."

The biggest problem: On Monday morning, we're going to be scraping the bottom of a barrel that rarely gets filled up. "We're just not well slept to begin with," Bils says. "So now we're going to rob another hour this weekend. That's gonna put a lot of the people into the danger zone."

Bils explains that the Monday after we push our clocks forward is rife with disaster, with higher instances of accidents both on the roads and in the workplace. Think of it as jet lag without the traveling, or like trying to function while a little drunk. "Poor sleep affects just about everything that is measurable in the human body," Bils says. Lack of sleep can even make you depressed. "Every bout of depression is preceded by a sleep issue," Bils explains. "If the depression is then treated, relapse almost always happens after another bout of sleep problems. Our emotional systems are highly dependent on really good sleep."

You'll get through this Monday (despite what you may think), and don't forget to acknowledge that you may not be at your best. "Usually, the advice I give to people is on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, just lay low," Bils warns. "Don't make any big decisions, be more careful than you normally would, don't accept marriage proposals — don't do anything that's critical."

Tips

- Spread out the pain. Instead of trying to get to sleep a full hour before your normal bedtime, try going to bed 20 minutes earlier tonight, then another 20 minutes on Saturday and again on Sunday.
- Bedrooms are for sleeping. Restrict TV, computer and phone use before bedtime, for you and your kids.
- Don't sabotage your efforts. Avoid any caffeine after noon, or maybe just skip the coffee, tea and soda for the weekend.

LIVING THE DREAM

"The Unbreakable Kimmy Schmidt" premieres today on Netflix streaming. / ERIC LIEBOWITZ, NETFLIX

Interview. Former "Office" star Ellie Kemper takes on the lead role in Tina Fey's "30 Rock" follow up.

Most people are trying to hide one or two weird things about themselves in their day-to-day lives, but Kimmy Schmidt, the main character in Tina Fey's new Netflix show "Unbreakable Kimmy Schmidt," is hiding something quite a bit weirder than most. She's just escaped a doomsday cult after 15 years, but that isn't stopping her from trying to make a go of it in New York City. And who better to play the wide-eyed innocence of someone who grew up in an underground bunker than Ellie Kemper, who's made something of a specialty of playing innocents?

This part really seems made for you. Was it written with you in mind?
What happened was, I met with Tina Fey and [co-creator] Robert Carlock, just at a general meeting about a year and a half ago, and then a few months later, I met with them again and they had the idea for the show. I think that Bob Greenblatt, who is the head of NBC, had asked if they would be interested in writing a show with me in mind and they said yes.

Having Tina Fey write a show for you must be pretty exciting.
Oh my god, it's like the biggest honor of all time. I have trouble believing that it happened, but it did happen, because I know the show is coming out on Friday, but it's absolutely surreal.

Were you a big "30 Rock" fan?
Yes. What if now I wasn't? And I was like, "And now I'm not!" No, I was an enormous fan. I loved "30 Rock," I loved "Bossypants." She's a cultural icon, which adds to the surrealness of it all that I would actually get to work with her. But I was a huge fan.

The show has a pretty dark premise. How do you balance that darkness with this being a sitcom and having jokes?
The subject matter is so serious and tragic and dark and needs to be dealt with very carefully. Robert and Tina did a great job of working with such a dark premise and were able to make a comedy from it. At first, I also was worried about, like, "OK, am I doing this appropriately? Am I portraying this character as she should be portrayed?" And the writing is so key to that, of course. When something tragic or dark does happen, it doesn't mean you have to shy away from comedy.

ELLIE KEMPER
GETTY IMAGES

Why do you think people like casting you as these innocent characters?
Just on a very surface level, I have a really big face, so I think that when I smile, it's just a big smile, because it's in proportion to the rest of my face. So there's that, which might have something to do with playing these wide-eyed smiley characters. Some of the characters I play err on the side of ditzy, but Kimmy is not a ditz. Any lack of knowledge she has is purely from a lack of experience and not a lack of intelligence. There's a resourcefulness and a craftiness there that enables her to go through those 15 years in the bunker. You can't be a survivor unless you are smart.

Channel changer

Tina's looking out for Ellie

The show moved from NBC to Netflix, which meant that episodes could go longer, and also that Kimmy could get up to slightly more risque activities, but when talking to the New York Times about it, Fey quashed that idea."We've met [Kemper's] mom," she said. "We're not going to do that to her. Unless, we can't get up to 24 minutes."

Familiar faces

Don't worry, Jane's back

"30 Rock" fans will be excited to see Jane Krakowski in the new show, playing the wealthy, self-absorbed mother of the mildly disturbed tot Kimmy ends up nannying.

Are you picking up anything from working with Jane?

What I love is she'll do anything for the joke. Whatever is required. She's such a lady in real life, and she's so warm and polished and I just feel better when I'm around her, and, you know, she smells good. And then she'll do these things, like whatever the scene calls for. No vanity, no pride, whatever it takes to get the joke done. Which is what you should do! I feel silly saying, "She's a pro." Of course she is! She's Jane Krakowski.

Films to see at the Israeli Film Fest

Festivals. This year's series tackles suicide, sex, war and fortune telling.

"Orange People" follows three generations of a Moroccan family in Israel. / PROVIDED

Grand moral and ethical questions loom large over this year's edition of the Israeli Film Festival. While the annual showcase of Israel's finest recent cinema always offers a peek into the familiar issues unique to the country and the region, many of the highlights from the 2015 festival grapple with more universal themes, albeit with a unique perspective.

This year's opening night film, "The Farewell Party" (Sat., March 7, p.m. and Sun., March 8, 3 p.m., International House), tackles euthanasia with wry charm. An elderly, amateur inventor crafts a mercy-killing device to help a terminal friend, word of which soon brings entreaties from others in their assisted-living community. Filmmakers Sharon Maymon and Tal Granit maintain a senior-comedy atmosphere without diminishing the issues surrounding death with dignity.

Turning from the end to the beginning, two documentaries look closely at the very stuff of life: "Sacred Sperm" (Thu., March 19, 7 p.m., Jack M. Barrack Hebrew Academy) questions strict sexual restrictions in the ultra-Orthodox Hasidic community, while "Seed of Life" (Sun., March 22, 7 p.m., International House) follows a grieving mother as she finds a surrogate mother to give birth using sperm saved from her dead son's body.

"Seed of Life" shares a double bill with another documentary made by Israel's Channel 10, A War Story, which examines the struggles faced by TV war correspondents both in the field and at home. It's one of two films that look at the Israeli-Palestinian conflict from a different perspective. The other, The Green Prince (Sat., March 28, 9 p.m., Gratz College), is a fascinating, if murky recounting of the story of a Hamas leader's son who becomes a prized Israeli informant.

Orange People (Sun., March 15, 7 p.m., Bryn Mawr Film Institute) centers on three generations of women in Israel's Moroccan minority culture. The eldest member of the family is either clairvoyant or simply narcoleptic, but is looking for an heir to take over her fortune telling role in their community. Her daughter has inherited the gift/condition, but is more concerned with discovering the secret of her mother's couscous to save her foundering restaurant.

Judi Dench is job hunting as well

Interview. The British Dame revisits her "Best Exotic Marigold Hotel" role and has some thoughts on who to cast in the third one.

Judi Dench reprises her role in the second "Best Marigold Hotel." / FOX SEARCHLIGHT

This likely won't make any other actors feel too great about their prospects, but even Judi Dench says that finding work is tough. And that's after winning an Oscar, becoming a dame and appearing in seven James Bond films. So what hope does the rest of the acting community have?

"I take what's offered. I don't think it gets easier," Dench offers. "It's the same thing with everybody, I think, that you play something, and very often after that you're sent something that is very, very similar to what you've just done. It's the last thing you want to do. I keep saying to my agent, 'Can't you find this play where it's about an Afghan woman who learns to walk the tightrope and then in the last act gets turned into a dragon?'"

While she waits for some enterprising young playwright to craft that exact work for her, she's revisiting some previous work for a sequel to the 2011 surprise hit "The Best Exotic Marigold Hotel." And while it might sound surprising for a woman who has played some fairly terrifying and challenging roles, aging expat Evelyn proved to be one of her most difficult — because the character is so close to herself.

"Four years ago, the one thing that worried me was that I used to be made up and get into my clothes and they'd say, 'OK, you're ready.' And I'd look into the mirror and I'd think, I don't know where this person is because all I see is me looking exactly like me wearing clothes that I would wear," she admits.

Dench admits the success of the first "Marigold Hotel" was something of a surprise, but she has a theory as to why it resonated with audiences. "I think it was probably the last thing people thought it was going to be," she says. "It was about a lot of people over a certain age who didn't give up, who were all prepared to take on a risk of some kind and had a bit of life left in them — which you know, after a while people don't think you should have."

So, then, how about a third installment? She's up for it, and she even knows someone who would top Richard Gere's appearance in the series' second entry. "Johnny Depp. Especially playing with me," she reveals, giggling uncontrollably. "What's the magic in Johnny Depp? Sex, of course."

JUDI DENCH
WIREIMAGE

Bonus question

Dench's death-defying stunts

Judi Dench admits that tackling "The Second Best Exotic Marigold Hotel" — as well as the original film — felt a bit like a con on her part. "If you're paid to go to India for eight weeks one year, and four years later you go back? Bewitching," she says. "And with a per diem! Paid for being there, just learn the lines, get on with it, do it as well as you can."

But doing as well as you can is difficult sometimes, like when director John Madden has her riding on the back of a motorcycle with co-star Bill Nighy — a key image from the first film that's repeated in the sequel. "That was pretty hairy," Dench admits. "You know he has this thing, Bill, where he has that carpal what's-it's-name? So he has to drive it [with two fingers from each hand]. And I'm on the back thinking, 'Oh well, it's all right,' but then John says, 'And now wave!'"

Sequel. The second 'Marigold Hotel' is more of the same-old

The old British legends hanging out at a run-down Indian hotel-cum-retirement home are back, this time dealing with a new set of hesitant romances, semi-farcical misunderstandings, very light drama and the cold specter of encroaching mortality. And because any movie with three or more old-timers means one of them must be saucy, that means nice Celia Imrie's Madge has to read "Fifty Shades of Grey" and make Bond-ian double entendres about franchise newbie Richard Gere's business.

The lowdown: If this were the 1930s, there would be two, maybe three, "Best Exotic Marigold Hotel" entries every year, cranked out a la Mickey Rooney's prolific and hugely profitable Andy Hardy series. In its two entries so far, the franchise has exhibited the same unfailingly modest and easily-regurgitated charm. This is to say story does not matter. Some plot threads will disappear for stretches or be forgotten about entirely. One will be resolved via an extravagant dance number. Never will the complicated notion of Brits invading an old colony be addressed, nor will the title: self-deprecating joke or just a title? Technically this is more hang-out movie than plot-movie, but the actors don't really spend time together so much as endlessly deploy the Bad Brains. A new rock doc looks at the heyday of a music scene.

The birth of punk

Scott Crawford was only 12 when he started hanging out at Washington, D.C. venues like the 9:30 Club to see now-legendary punk bands like Fugazi, Bad Brains and Government Issue. Three decades later, as the father of three children hovering around that same age, he can't help but look back on that time. "It was interesting to me how things that I had learned or absorbed during that period came out in weird ways as a parent," Crawford says.

"As I got older and realized how important this period of time was, I also realized that I can look to what I learned and see how to apply it moving forward."

Those memories led to the production of "Salad Days: A Decade of Punk in Washington, DC (1980-1990)," a new documentary that documents that vital music scene with archival footage and interviews with most of the leading names from the period and its famous fans, including Ian MacKaye, Dave Grohl, Henry Rollins and Thurston Moore.

Crawford, who will appear at Sunday's screening, helped document the scene with his fanzine, "Metrozine." He was introduced to the music by a friend's older sister, but it took some time before he realized that he could experience it in person.

"When you realize that this stuff is in your backyard, it's a pretty big deal," he says. "All this music you're buying is literally being made here, and as a 12 year old that was a weird concept to grasp. I wasn't into sports and I hadn't really found my niche, so once I discovered this music and started going to shows, this became the thing that I wanted to know everything about. The fanzine was, in a way, almost like a diary."

Quoted

"I wasn't into sports and I hadn't really found my niche, so once I discovered this music and started going to shows, this became the thing that I wanted to know everything about." Crawford

In context

Make way for grunge

While the heyday of the D.C. scene was eventually eclipsed by an influx of flannel-clad bands from the Pacific Northwest, its legacy remains.

Minor Threat introduced the idea of the "straight edge" lifestyle as a side effect of all-ages shows, both notions which soon spread into the larger culture. And the DIY ethic of the scene and its label of record, Dischord, were a model for the Internet age and the collapse of the major label record industry.

same few character tics. Bill Nighy stammers. Judi Dench pouts. Maggie Smith glowers. Imrie does her best "View to a Kill"-era Roger Moore.

No one is called on to do more, and yet they're such pros that even doing next-to-nothing is infused with great weight. In fact, Nighy, Dench and Smith effortlessly complicate their thin business with deep notes of regret and longing — feelings the blue-print of a screenplay could never dream of turning into words or actions. What actually happens in "The Second Best Exotic Marigold Hotel" doesn't matter, and it goes on so long — only a half-hour shorter than "Goodfellas" — that you may forget your life before the film began. Like the hotel itself, it's a movie held together by bubble gum and duct tape — a two-star residence at best that nevertheless feels cozy. If all that happened in the inevitable "The Third Best Exotic Marigold Hotel: Dream Warriors" is they played shuffleboard — well, that actually might be preferable to what happens here. MATT PRIGGE

Dance doc. 'Ballet 422' is a calm look at the stress of creating art

MAGNOLIA PICTURES

"Ballet 422" is a familiar kind of minimalist documentary: the kind that gives you little in the way of hard facts, including much about the man — young New York City Ballet corps member Justin Peck — present in the majority of its shots. When the film, by cinematographer Jody Lee Lipes (who shot "Martha Marcy May Marlene," "Girls" and more), starts, Peck has already been chosen to choreograph a ballet for his colleagues. It's a daunting task, but we only know this by staring at his face, which bears a permanent look of vague shock. He never flips out, one way or the other, as though he's in a constant state of internalizing the stress and weight on his shoulders. Peck doesn't need to put his anxieties into words; as the old screen writing maxim goes, he shows, not tells.

That approach extends to every aspect of "Ballet 422," which has an extremely subjective take on the material it's grabbing right from reality. But its take comes across not in words but in what it chooses to show. The arc of "Ballet 422" is almost too simple: It shows the process of making a piece of art. It may be Peck's baby, but he has to find ways to communicate his ideas to his performers. As the film goes on, it drifts away from Peck and his dancers, dwelling on those who make the costumes and those who work in administration. Every ballet is a beast with multiple parts moving seemingly independent of each other. In the end, the piece lives on by itself; the creator's identity is ultimately irrelevant. In fact, with its complete lack of "Black Swan"-ish ego and hysterics, "Ballet 422" is, by far, the calmest dance movie ever made. MATT PRIGGE

Hozier: 'I don't know my place as an activist'

Interview. 'Take Me To Church' has made the musician the face of equality, but he says he's not ready to be the next musician-cum-humanitarian.

When we caught up with Andrew Hozier-Byrne — better known by his stage name, Hozier — at a big London concert, he was visibly nervous. "This is very much outside my comfort zone," he tells us, adding that he prefers intimate gigs. But given his Grammy and European Music Award nominations for Song of the Year (both for "Take Me To Church"), those intimate touring days are over. Big venues await.

While Hozier is shy about performing, he's not afraid to confront social injustices in his music. "I think that it's sad that what people think is controversial is that there's a lad kissing in it rather than the implied murder at the end of it," he says of the reaction to his provocative "Take Me To Church" short, which sees a gay couple violently attacked by a gang.

The video itself references the abuses against the LGBT community in Russia. The singer, who received social media support from celebrities such as Stephen Fry, says, "I wasn't nervous about its reception; I thought it was a delicate subject — but I don't think there's much controversy about the video. It was more about whether we did the idea justice."

The 24-year-old, who is not gay, is also openly supporting Ireland's referendum on civil marriage equality this year, which would offer gay couples the same rights as heterosexual unions.

So, is the singer-songwriter to topple Bono and Bob Geldof as Ireland's premier humanitarian activist? "Hmm, I don't know where my place is as an activist." After a considered pause, he adds: "I have strong opinions about a lot of things, as does everyone, but I think all that an artist does is make music that reflects the way they see the world."

"Irish people have a love-hate relationship with their culture — it's had a troubled history and there's still a great hangover that lingers," he reflects. "But I can't speak on behalf of the Irish people."

Politics

Voice of a generation?

Hozier, like millions of millennials dubbed "Generation Rent," feels let down "politically and certainly through financial mismanagement," lamenting in his words that "42 percent of the European banking crisis was paid for by Irish taxpayers."

Although reluctant to be the spokesman for disillusioned 20-somethings, a great deal of what he says about tolerance reflects the views of his peers: "The slow progress with civil rights and the fact that homosexuality and divorce were only made legal in the last 30 years – these things need to be questioned."

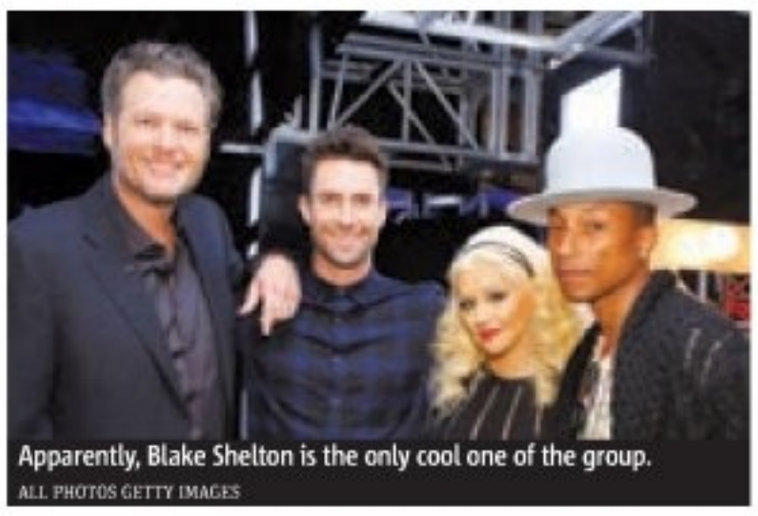
1 Demi Moore's daughter makes dating awkward

LOOKS LIKE SEAN FRIDAY HAS HAD ABOUT ENOUGH OF TALLULAH WILLIS.

You know what's super-awkward when you're trying to carry on a nice, normal, grown-up romance? Having your 21-year-old daughter around all the time to kill the mood. At least, that's what Demi Moore is reportedly discovering since having youngest daughter Tallulah Willis move in with her following Willis' 45-day rehab stint last summer, according to the National Enquire. Apparently the living arrangements are getting too cramped for Moore's boyfriend, musician Sean Friday. "Having Tallulah around the house has almost completely killed the romance between them," a source says. "Whenever Sean and Demi go out to dinner or a yoga class, Demi invites Tallulah along. She invites her friends over, too, which gives Sean and Demi very little privacy. Sean told Demi if Tallulah doesn't go, he will. But Demi warned Sean that if push comes to shove, he's the one who'll get the boot." This sounds like it will end well.

2 Adam Levine isn't the only 'Voice' judge causing strife backstage



Apparently, Blake Shelton is the only cool one of the group.

ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Man, "The Voice" sounds like such a pleasant place to work. While Adam Levine and Pharrell Williams are busy feuding with each other, fellow judge Christina Aguilera has been busy driving the no doubt already stressed production staff crazy. "She just has ridiculous demands since coming back as a judge, and everyone is wishing she did not return," a source tells Radar Online. "Christina is such a terror to work with. She is frequently late and she doesn't even seem to care or apologize for holding up the filming of the show. To make matters worse, she is constantly fighting with Adam. They cannot stand each other." You know, I'm no expert, but I'm starting to see a common element in all these "Voice" backstage strife stories, and it rhymes with Shmadam Shmevine.

3 The Justin Bieber Photoshop speculation game is back

Feeling some intense withdrawal from all the Justin Bieber Photoshop debates that sprang up around his Calvin Klein shoot? Fear not! As Bieber's quest to be seen as a serious adult big-boy-pants man continues, we have yet another opportunity with his new Men's Health cover. Whether or not his appearance — shirtless, because obviously — has been altered in any way, it's definitely unsettling the way he just stares at you. Try to move around. His eyes follow you.

And as for Photoshop questions, Bieber says in a behind-the-scenes video, saying, "It's not Photoshopped, for all you fools out there saying it's Photoshopped." Oh yeah? Then why is your head so freakishly small in this one? It's not like we've never seen a picture of you.

Ladies, here's your live-action Gaston

No one's got a swell cleft in his chin like … Luke Evans? The Welsh "Hobbit" star — who recently and wisely dropped out of a remake of "The Crow" — has been tapped by director Bill Condon to play the walking embodiment of male vanity, Gaston, in his live-action "Beauty and the Beast" opposite the already announced Emma Watson as Belle, according to the Hollywood Reporter. Oh, and if that's not enough man candy for you, former "Downton Abbey" fan favorite Dan Stevens will be playing the Beast, news he tweeted about in the most adorable way possible: with a big sign that says "Beast Mode."

The stars of feminism aren't men!

Re: 'Celebrate feminist men on Women's Day' (Metro, March 5)
I cannot express how profoundly disappointed and outraged I am. As if our world isn't male-dominated enough, we must now pay tribute to male feminists on International Women's Day? Did columnist Jenna Busch even take a moment to Google prominent or ground-breaking women throughout the world before settling on male feminists as the real stars of contemporary feminism? In case research trouble resulted in this atrocity of an opinion piece, please let me provide a list of contemporary women who are doing amazing things throughout the world: Chimamanda Ngozi Adichie (writer), Malala Yousufzai (education activist), Eqbal Asa'd (youngest doctor in the world), Reshma Saujani (founder of Girls Who Code), or Mae Jemison (first African-American woman in space). I purposefully left out women in the entertainment industry because Tina Fey, Amy Poehler, Mindy Kaling, and Beyonce should be rather well-known feminists by now, and yet Busch didn't profile any of them either. You could have spotlighted female politicians, female scientists, female authors (we are, as Busch pointed out, 51 percent of the population, so there are a lot of us) but instead you chose male feminists, who deserve a cookie at most for being decent human beings.

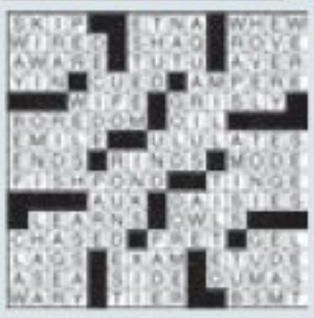
Thursday's answer



BEHIND THE CLINTON CURTAIN

Opinion

TOM FOREMAN
POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT FOR CNN

I was chatting with a Republican-leaning friend, when she sighed, slumped in her chair, and blurted, "Well, I guess Hillary is a shoo-in for the presidency!"

"You mean, you're sure she'll run?" I said.

"No, I'm sure she will win," my friend replied, looking as glum as Kanye West in a room with no mirrors. "She's deflected most of the Benghazi stuff, she's got the 'first woman in the Oval Office' thing going, and now she has a grandchild for the photo ops. Stick a fork in it. The race is done."

"Hmm," I said, "I would not be so certain."

I didn't have some secret insight into Clinton's campaign plans. Nor had I consulted a Magic 8-Ball. I expressed doubt because politicians who have been in power a while have a remarkable tendency to screw things up.

And now just days later, and the former first lady/senator/cabinet member is tangled in a web of messy headlines. You've probably already heard the revelations that she used a private account for all of her emails while secretary of state. You've also likely heard the swift defense from her allies about how she really did nothing wrong, no laws were violated, thousands of emails were handed to government archivists anyway, and yadda yadda yadda.

This may not prove to be a serious legal matter. But it is a significant political issue that can be summed up in a phrase: It makes her look sneaky.

The story super charges long-standing accusations that Hillary Clinton doesn't like the idea of the public watching too closely as she conducts the public's business. It also underscores claims from many in the media that despite promises of unprecedented transparency, the Obama team is perceived to have operated the most secretive White House in recent memory.

Oh sure, her true fans will howl "It's not true!" But she needs independents to win the White House. And they will have a harder time casting those votes, if they suspect ugly secrets are hidden behind the Clinton curtain.

Peyton's back

Manning taking pay cut

Broncos quarterback Peyton Manning passed his physical Thursday, making his return to the Broncos official at a $4 million pay cut (he will make $15 million instead of $19 million). The news ends speculation over his fitness to play following a lackluster finish to the 2014 season.

FANTASY: GRAB THESE PLAYERS ON HYPE DELAY

Hope is rarely lost with baseball prospects. Guys can scuffle for a month, a year or even a few seasons before really finding their groove and producing to previously expected levels.

A prime recent example is Alex Gordon, the former No. 2 overall pick who looked completely lost in his first four years in the big leagues. In the four seasons since then, he's been an All-Star twice, a .282 hitter who hit 76 homers and stole 50 bases. We call this a "post-hype" kind of sleeper, and it's an excellent way to find value later in your draft. This year's candidates:

Xander Bogaerts hit .240 last season, belting 12 home runs and driving in 46 runs. / GETTY IMAGES

'Polly' in pocket

Gregory Polanco is a 6-foot-5, 235-pound specimen who hit 34 homers and stole 127 bases in 410 minor league games. He was finally called up to the bigs last June but badly disappointed with a .235 average and 59 strikeouts in 277 at-bats. The Pirates still have plenty of faith in the 23-year-old, however, as they've traded away Travis Snider and will give Polanco a chance to play every day in right field. Jump back on board.

Fifth Red Bird

Carlos Martinez has only started eight games in his brief big-league career and sports a 4.28 ERA overall. He also has to win the fifth starter's job in spring training and has never thrown more than 104 innings in a season (including minors). But that's why we can get him with one of our last flier picks. Martinez is a guy we like to bet on because he can pile up strikeouts in a hurry and is still just 23 years old. He struck out 340 batters in 327 minor league innings and an impressive 108 K's in 117.2 major league innings.

Bogie for Bogaerts

Perhaps Red Sox nation expected too much of 21-year-old Xander Bogaerts last season. He started off hot (.304 batting average as of June 1), but hit a wall and crashed to a .240 finish. Bogaerts admitted that his body gave up on him and therefore spent this offseason training at a performance institute with other big leaguers. It's easy to gamble on a sustained bounce-back for Bogaerts because he's shortstop eligible and is available in the 14th-17th round of most drafts. He'd have to regress further not to meet value at that bargain price.

Howard's Phils teammates glad he's still with the club

MLB. Ryan Howard is finally healthy, so what does that mean for his production at the plate?

Ryan Howard is not known for his defense but he was plenty defensive in front of his locker when he met with the media for his initial discourse of the spring.

"Are you happy to be here," a journalist asked Howard. The Phillie with the second-most homers in club history, who has never been so sleek, raised his eyebrows and fired back. "Are you happy that I'm here?"

"Overjoyed," a scribe, who failed at Humor 101, answered.

This is the most uncomfortable and awkward spring training of Howard's career, which can be divided up into two parts: very productive and the post-Achilles injury.

Howard impressed during the spring training opener against the New York Yankees. He singled twice and drove in the Phillies first run of the Grapefruit League season. He beat the shift by lofting a ball to shallow left field and he lined a single to right in two at bats..

"I'm just trying to get hits, put the ball in play and make things happen," Howard said. "

That would be huge for Howard and the Phillies since the Big Piece has been at the top of the unproductive out chart, courtesy of strikeouts, since he came up lame making the final out of the 2011 NLDS against the St. Louis Cardinals.

"He [Howard] really is the key for us," Ben Revere said. "He's been hurt. He's been through a lot over the last couple of seasons. If he could do what he's capable of doing, that changes everything for this team."

Cliff Lee agrees. "We all saw what he can do," Lee said. "If Ryan Howard hits like he's capable, he's the difference maker."

Ryan Howard went 0-for-3 a day after getting two hits in the Phillies' second Grapefruit League game Wednesday against the Yankees. / GETTY IMAGES

Howard has dropped about 15 pounds. "I cut out the sugar," Howard said. "I really don't need it and I feel so much better."

The Phillies lightning rod has been arriving early and working hard at camp. "I'm doing all the extra work in the morning: ground balls, hitting, conditioning, everything that goes on in between. One we get into the season, the easy part is just playing the game. If I can make it through all of this, then I think I will be alright."

"If" is the key word — if Howard remains healthy and if he plays well. He looked good at the plate and made a nice play at first ranging to his right. Howard actually looked nimble. This is a small step, but the slugger, who was once the most feared hitter in the game, looks like he's moving in the right direction.

"I'm just trying to stay positive," Howard said. "Why be negative? It takes a lot more energy to be negative than to be positive. Negative bad. Positive good."

By the numbers

$25M

Ryan Howard is due $25 million during the 2015 season. Last season he hit 23 home runs and drove in 95 RBIs, and it is expected he could eclipse that production during the upcoming season.

Phils speedster

So who is this Herrera guy?

You may have noticed (or perhaps not) a speedy Phillies outfielder named Odubel Herrera slapping base hits left and right while pestering opponents on the base paths during the first few games of spring training.

Herrera is a Rule 5 draft pick, like Shane Victorino before him, and as such has a leg up on the competition as far as making the 25-man roster goes. He must remain in the big leagues all season or be placed on waivers and offered back to the Rangers, the team he was claimed from.

But inside baseball aside, the 5-foot-10, 200 pounder is 23 years old, and has already made an impression on Phillies skipper Ryne Sandberg.

"He stood out," the manager said. "He was a sparkplug at the top of the order and did a great job with the stolen bases, getting into scoring position. He did a good job squaring up balls, hitting hard ground balls and line drives. And he was very fluid in center field."

Herrera was the batting champion (.372) and MVP in the Venezuelan winter league and recently switched from infield to outfield.

Sports news you need to know

1 The madness heats up

It's getting closer and closer to the best time of year for college hoops fans.

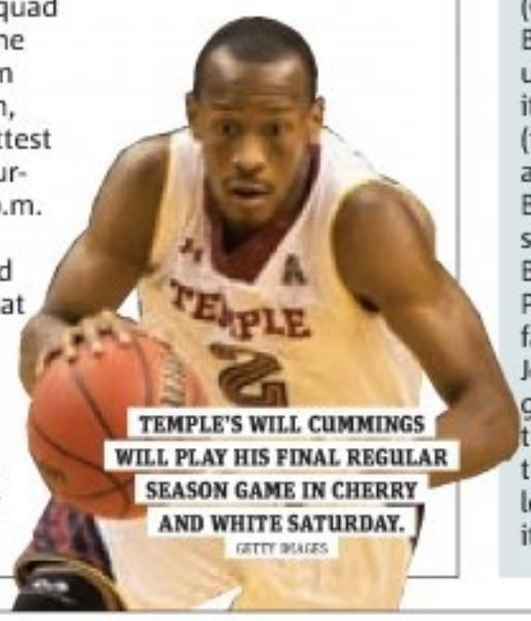
Only two of the local Big 5 teams have at large bids nearly wrapped up, and each will be in action this weekend to finish their regular seasons.

Temple, which is a borderline bubble squad but looks to be on the inside of the 68-team field will host UConn, one of the AAC's hottest squads at home Saturday afternoon at 2 p.m. (ESPN2).

The Huskies could be a dangerous threat on the road, looking to make some noise with desperation as the season winds down. UConn will need a win over Temple and a deep run in the AAC tournament next week to even have a shot.

Villanova is in a different situation than the Owls. Instead of trying to get in, they're trying to solidify a No. 1 seed in the NCAA Tournament.

They'll wrap up their regular season at home against Big East rival St. John's. This game also tips off at 2 p.m. (FOX). EVAN MACY



TEMPLE'S WILL CUMMINGS WILL PLAY HIS FINAL REGULAR SEASON GAME IN CHERRY AND WHITE SATURDAY. GETTY IMAGES

2 Flyers face showdown vs. Bruins

This weekend could be the entire season for the Flyers. After inching as close as four points behind the eighth-place Bruins for the final playoff spot, Philly has slowly fallen to earth and is in need of every single point it can muster.

Saturday at 1 p.m. (CSN) they'll head to Boston, looking to pick up two points and make it a race again in the East (though the Panthers are also in the mix, between Boston and Philly in the standings). After their Beantown showdown, Philly will travel a little farther south to New Jersey to face the struggling Devils. Two wins this weekend could save the Flyers' season. Two losses could all but end it. EVAN MACY

3 The 76ers are fun to watch, really

With so much Eagles news to keep Philly fans distracted, many are tuning out the 76ers, who made their splash at the trade deadline recently and now field a team of relative no-names as they approach a top pick in the NBA draft this spring.

But the team, led by Isaiah Canaan, has been playing its heart out, most recently in a Wednesday overtime loss to the Thunder. That's right, it took the West Coast power from Oklahoma City overtime and 49 points from Russell Westbrook to defeat the ragtag Sixers.

Philly is at it again Friday at home against the Utah Jazz, a 7 p.m. start (CSN). EVAN MACY

COLE HAMELS GETTY IMAGES

Eyes remain on Lee, Hamels

The Phillies' slow-moving rebuilding plan had a good day Thursday, as Cliff Lee made his first start since last July and looked like his old self doing it.

The veteran lefty needed just 16 pitches to make it through two quick innings with his velocity up around where it is supposed to be. And even though the Phils fell to the Astros 6-3, the first two innings are all that really mattered.

So how does this help the Phils' rebuild?

Not expected to contend in 2015, the better Lee pitches, the better crop of prospects they can get in exchange for him prior to the trade deadline this summer — or possibly even sooner.

If Lee is Philly's second-best trade chip, Cole Hamels is their best, and he'll make his debut this weekend. You can be sure the Red Sox front office, and Red Sox fans will pay just a little bit of attention. A few days ago it was reported that a Phillies scout was seen at Red Sox camp, assumably taking a look at Boston's crop of young prospects.

With Lee and Hamels each taking the hill once a week, the rumors will continue to swirl. All Phils fans can do is enjoy their aces while they're still wearing red and white pinstripes.

Friday's game against the Yankees and Saturday's versus the Blue Jays will each be televised. Both start at 1:05 p.m. EVAN MACY

10 Storylines to watch as Union start 2015 season

The Union return for the 2015 season with a new look, a bevy of new faces but the same goal — reaching the playoffs this fall.

They kick off the year at home Saturday, a 4 p.m. start against the Colorado Rapids. The match will air on 6ABC.

Here's a look at some of the most important things to keep in mind when the Union take to the pitch and begin another season of MLS soccer.

JEFF MCMENAMIN
@Jeff_McMenamin
sports@metro.us

Veteran Fred Carreiro hopes he can help lead the Union to an elusive playoff berth in 2015. / ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

1 Will the Union finally reach the playoffs?

The Union haven't made the playoffs since 2011 and it's been the biggest topic hanging over the heads of the entire organization entering every season since. The league has added one additional playoff spot to each conference with clubs Orlando City and New York City FC joining the league this season. If they can repeat their success of last season, where they finished sixth, it would be good enough for the final playoff spot in the East.

2 Who will lead team in goals?

Over the past two seasons, Conor Casey has led all Union forwards with 18 goals. Sebastien Le Toux follows just behind him with 15. Expect a new leader in goals this season. The Union have played with two strikers up top in preseason, with C.J. Sapong and more recently Fernando Aristeguieta. Expect Aristeguieta to lead the team in goals this season. He had four in three preseason games.

3 Can M'Bolhi be consistent?

Rais M'Bolhi played in four games last season and held a 1-1-2 record, tallying seven saves while giving up four goals. He'll have positional security through the first month of the season, as Andre Blake recovers from knee surgery, but in order to keep his starting job he'll need to show consistency in net.

4 Can the back line work together?

Newly acquired Steven Vitoria and Ethan White, who logged 12 starts in 2014, will hold crucial roles this season for the Union defense. The two are expected to start next to each other at center back, where names like Amobi Okugo and Carlos Valdes manned the middle for the majority of last season. Alongside Raymon Gaddis and Sheanon Williams, this unit will have to find a way to work together and make M'Bolhi's job in net much easier at the beginning of the season.

5 US Open Cup Final again?

The highlight of the Union's 2014 season was playing in the U.S. Open Cup final for the first time in club history. Despite a 3-1 loss to the Sounders in extra time, coach Jim Curtin seeks revenge in 2015. He was quoted as saying the team has some "unfinished business" in the tournament this season.

Maurice Edu

6 Who will make All-Star team?

Last season, just Maurice Edu was selected to the squad from the Union. Expect Edu, along with forwards Aristeguieta and Andrew Wenger, to have a shot of making it this season. Wenger is one of the strongest and fastest forwards in the league. He broke out last season and should play a major role in the Union offense.

More Union stories

7 Dzenan Catic's impact
Catic, the Union's first pick in the second round, scored 63 goals in two years at Davenport University. He'll have the opportunity to learn all season from strikers like Aristeguieta, Sapong and Casey. If he learns fast enough, he could be seeing minutes as a sub in some crucial games for the Union this season.

8 Andre Blake's return
Blake's timeline is 4-6 weeks, as he recovers from knee surgery, which works out to be sometime between March 23 and April 6. He led the team in save percentage last season (88 percent) but only started in just one regular-season match. M'Bolhi's play along with Blake's health will ultimately decide when he sees his first action this season.

9 New CBA's impact
The MLS announced on Wednesday that they came to an agreement with the MLS Players Union for a new five-year collective-bargaining agreement. The new agreement creates free agency for players 28 and older, with eight years of MLS experience. There will also be salary increases, based on how much each player makes as well as an increase of the minimum annual salary to $60,000 and a raising of the salary cap.

Sebastien Le Toux

10 The fan experience
The Union and Dogfish Head Craft Brewery have teamed up to create the Dogfish River Deck at PPL Park. Fans can now enjoy their favorite beers at the stadium such as Namaste, Aprihop, and their flagship 60 Minute IPA at a brand-new beer garden. Of course, Yards' Sons of Ben Rowdy Style Ale will be available as well.
